

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to methods and agents for thermal conditioning of a biological cell, methods and uses of said agents for releasing and insulating ingredients outside the biological cell, and for quantitatively and qualitatively detecting the released ingredient and to a method for sampling biological cells which consists in carrying out in one step the sampling said biological cells in a culture medium and in releasing cellular ingredients during said sampling. Sampling devices are also disclosed.